

Joint ASME NM Section/Student Chapter Dinner Meeting

Managing Your Career during Turbulent Times

Christy G. Brundage, MS, PHR
HR Strategic Program Manager
Technology and Manufacturing Group
Intel Corporation

Christy Brundage will provide tools for catapulting your career to new heights despite recession-like conditions. She will address the following topics:

- Managing your career search,
- Starting in a new profession, and
- Maintaining your employability.

Christy Brundage is the HR Strategic Program Manager for Intel's Technology and Manufacturing Business (TMG). Christy is responsible for driving key HR initiatives across TMG. Christy's specific areas of interest are developing engineering and technical talent, leadership development and diversity. Since joining Intel in March of 2005, Christy has worked primarily as a human resources generalist providing employee relations and coaching for employees and senior management. Among her key accomplishments includes serving as the Career Resources Program Manager during the 2007 workforce downsizing at the Intel NM site. Christy was instrumental in establishing the Intel New Mexico Career Resource Center and developing a successful partnership and process model for career transition services with New Mexico Department of Workforce Solutions. Christy has over ten years of HR and operations experience, working for Intel, Eli Lilly and Company, General Electric and Arthur Andersen LLP. Christy has a M.S. in Human Resource Management and a B.S. in Accounting from Purdue University.
